

Is the United States, as the world's super power, morally obligated to intervene in humanitarian crises?

As a class, we will examine two instances in which the United States did or did not intervene in humanitarian crises: Rwanda (1994) and Kosovo (1999). As you research each crisis prepare to explore the above question.

Read Chapter 20 “You Choose, You Lose” from The 60 Second Philosopher by Andrew Pessin and jot down a few of your thoughts below. Anticipate how this might relate to today’s lesson.
